SCOTT ALLMAN

CONTEMPORARY JAZZ FOR A NEW GENERATION

THE BUZZ

REVIEW FROM WWW.THESMOOTHJAZZRIDE.COM | Ronald Jackson

Once again, the gates to our contemporary/smooth jazz community are opened to a new and exciting artist, keyboardist Scott Allman, who has released his sparkling debut album, Generations, as proof positive of his qualifications to be among our promising up-and-coming artists who truly come bearing gifts. Not only does Allman demonstrate playing skill but, having written and produced all of the material, he shows a clear grasp of the mechanics of the contemporary jazz vibe, and he knows and obviously feels what's at the very core of good, solid music.

REVIEW FROM WWW.CRITICALJAZZ.COM | Brent Black

Allman is a promising keyboardist and composer and is joined by Darren Rahn on the 2011 release Generations. "Flurry" opens the release with a nice moving bass line and a infectious lyrical development. Allman lets the tune develop all most organically as nothing seems forced or remotely approaching the self indulgent vibe often associated with this side of the contemporary jazz street. A somewhat emotionally charged piece with Darren Rahn turning in a spot on performance. A release of texture and depth, an intriguing three dimensional sonic depth of field has Generations on a slightly different harmonic path than the usual smooth jazz offerings served up for critical batting practise...Long story short - This release is just right!

REVIEW FROM WWW.SMOOTHJAZZTHERAPY.COM | Denis Poole

Scott Allman hails from Illinois and is all set to make a big splash with his debut CD 'Generations'. It's ten, self penned, tracks indicate that he has a flair for melodic contemporary jazz and the first single from the album demonstrates this to perfection.
